Her Majesty's Attorney General

-v-

P.A. Jouan

Judgment

THE BAILIFF: Stand up Mr. Jouan please. What you did as you rightly said was one of the most foolish things in your life, but we are satisfied that you have learned your lesson. As the Solicitor General has said and it is important that this should be reported, that the system of exempt transactions which is recorded by the Housing Committee depends for its very viability on the fact of people being honest with the Committee, and if they are not, then the whole system could break down. However, in mitigation you have accepted that you did wrong and you have been co-operative and pleaded guilty, and you have in fact accepted the sanctions asked for by the Solicitor General. Therefore you are fined five hundred pounds (£500) in default two months, and the costs are seventy-five pounds (£75) you pay two hundred and fifty pounds (£250) now, and the rest within four weeks. ✓
