

1614. June 29. KERR against MITCHELHILL.

No 5.

In an improbation at the instance of George Kerr of Sutherlandhall against George Mitchelhill, the LORDS sustained the pursuit at his instance for the production and certification, but they would not give him place to improve, except he were heir.

Kerse, MS. fol. 205.

1617. February EARL of TULLIBARDINE against JAMES DALZIELL.

No 6.

In an action between the Earl of Tullibardine and James Dalziell, the LORDS found, that James Arnot, who proponed an allegiance upon a tack set to the Laird of Clunie, the right whereof pertained to him as assignee to James Dalziell, who was assignee to the Laird of Clunie's escheat, might improve the horning executed at the instance of James Dalziell, upon the which horning, the tack set to Clunie was found null, as being set by the Earl of Athol, who was then rebel, at the instance of the said James Dalziell.

Kerse, MS. fol. 206.

1618. March 19. A. against B.

No 7.

Found, that the heritor of the lands could not be heard to improve a precept granted by his superior, to a person as heir to his father, who had an annualrent forth of the lands, the original charter and sasine being produced with the retour and sasine given to the son; and that because the heritor held the lands of the superior, and not of the King, and so was not superior of the annualrent.

Kerse, MS. fol. 206.

1619. January 29. SMALL against NAPIER.

No 8.

FOUND, that an apparent heir may pursue for improbation of writs or bonds, ad hunc effectum, that they may improve; and this sustained against the production tantum.

Kerse, MS. fol. 206.

1619. July 7. LORD OGILVY against KINGHORN.

No 9.

In improbations, the LORDS would not sustain a reply in favours of a stranger, that the pursuer had right from him, whose rights made to the defender.
