DECISION

Decision of the tribunal

- (1) The Tribunal finds that rent repayment orders be made in the sums set out below in favour of the applicants, the Tribunal being satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the respondents have committed an offence pursuant to s.95(1) of the Housing Act 2004, namely that a person commits an offence if he is a person having control of or managing a house which is required to be licensed under Part three of the 2004 Act but is not so licensed. Under section 99 of the 2004 Act “house” means a building or part of a building consisting of one or more dwellings.

- (2) The amounts of the rent repayment orders are for Gabrielle Delprete and Jorge Camara the sum of £3,824.35 for the rent paid relating to the period of 2 September 2019 and 8 January 2020 and for Elisa Pierre the sum of £2,632.26 for the rent paid relating to the period of 30 September 2019 and 8 January 2020 and for Sakshi Kabra the sum of £2,248.65 for the rent paid relating to the period of 21 September 2019 and 8 January 2020.
- (3) the tribunal determines that there be an order for the refund of the application fees in the sum of £300 pursuant to Rule 13(2) of the Tribunal Rules.

Reasons for the tribunal’s decision

Introduction

1. The applicants made an application for a rent repayment order pursuant to the terms of s.41 of the Housing and Planning Act 2016 in respect of a property known as Flat 7 Carter House, Brune Street, E1 7NN This property is a six bedroom property with no living room in the London Borough of Tower Hamlets let to multiple occupants on separate tenancy agreements all within the same ex-Council flat in a large block of flats.
2. The tribunal did not inspect the property as it considered the documentation and information before it in the trial bundle enabled the tribunal to proceed with this determination and also because of the restrictions and regulations arising out of the Covid-19 pandemic.
3. The hearing of the application took place on Friday 21 May 2021. The applicant appeared with representation as more particularly described above. The respondents did not appear nor were there any representatives present on their behalf. The Tribunal decided to proceed in their absence in accordance with Rule 34 of The Tribunal Procedure (First-tier Tribunal) (Property Chamber) Rules 2013 S.I. 2013 No. 1169 (L. 8) as the Tribunal was satisfied that the parties had been notified of the hearing or that reasonable steps had been taken to notify the parties of the hearing; and the Tribunal considered that it was in the interests of justice to proceed with the hearing. The Applicant attended with his representative and was ready to proceed with their application.

4. By Directions dated 1 February 2021 the respondents were directed to provide to the Tribunal and the applicants by email their Bundle of Documents in respect of the Application for a Rent Repayment Order by 16 April 2021. The Tribunal did not receive any bundle from the respondent. The applicants also received no Bundle from the Respondent.
5. The Tribunal noted it has received no application to extend time nor any meaningful correspondence from the respondent. The Tribunal also noted that the respondent's address for correspondence had been given as the subject address, and a connected email address has been used for communication of Directions throughout. Consequently, the Tribunal was minded to bar the respondents from participation in the proceedings on grounds that they had failed to comply with the Tribunal's Directions. Written representations on the question whether the application should be struck out were requested. Thereafter the respondent failed to comply with the Tribunals directions or at all.
6. On 27 April 2021 Judge Carr issued an unless order requiring the respondents to comply with Directions by 6 May 2021. They failed to do so. The unless order stated "Unless by 4pm on Thursday 6 May 2021 the Respondents comply with paragraph 10 of the Directions of 1 February 2021, they will be automatically debarred from the proceedings without further order, and the Tribunal will go on to determine all matters against them pursuant to rule 9(1), (3)(a), (7) and (8) of the Tribunal Procedure (First Tier Tribunal) (Property Chamber) Rules.". No one appeared at the hearing and as such nothing further needed be done in this regard.
7. Rights of appeal are set out in the annex to this decision and relevant legislation is set out in an appendix to this decision.
8. This has been a remote hearing which has been consented to by the parties. The form of remote hearing was coded as CVPREMOTE - use for a hearing that is held entirely on the Ministry of Justice CVP platform with all participants joining from outside the court. A face-to-face hearing was not held because it was not possible due to the COVID-19 pandemic restrictions and regulations and because all issues could be determined in a remote hearing. The documents that were referred to are in a bundle of many pages, the contents of which we have recorded and which were accessible by all the parties. Therefore, the tribunal had before it an electronic/digital trial bundle of documents prepared by the applicants, in accordance with previous directions.
9. The applicants are the former occupants of the property. The applicants signed tenancy agreements where the landlord was shown as Thamlet Estates. The applicants believe that there was a contractual relationship between Thamlet and the respondents that related to the property and the occupational tenants. The respondents are the owners of the property as listed on its registered title.

Background and the law

10. Section 41 of the Housing and Planning Act 2016 allows tenants to apply to the Tribunal for a rent repayment order. The Tribunal must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that a person/company has committed an offence described in Part three of the Act and in that regard section 95 of the 2004 Act states: -

95 Offences in relation to licensing of houses under this Part

(1) A person commits an offence if he is a person having control of or managing a house which is required to be licensed under this Part (see section 85(1)) but is not so licensed.

11. Every property to which Part 3 of the Act applies must be licensed (s.85(1) Housing Act 2004). As stated at s.85 (1) of the 2004 Act:

“(1) Every Part 3 house must be licensed under this Part unless—

(a) it is an HMO to which Part 2 applies (see section 55(2)), or

(b) a temporary exemption notice is in force in relation to it under section 86, or

(c) a management order is in force in relation to it under Chapter 1 or 2 of Part 4.”

12. The meaning of a “person having control” and “person managing” is provided by s.263 of the Housing Act 2004. “Person managing” is defined at subsection (3) as:

“[...] the person who, being an owner or lessee of the premises — receives (whether directly or through an agent or trustee) rents or other payments from—

(i) in the case of an HMO, persons who are in occupation as tenants or licensee of parts of the premises;

(ii) in the case of a house to which Part 3 applies (see section 79(2)), persons who are in occupation as tenants or licensees of parts of the premises, or of the whole of the premises;

would so receive those rents or other payments but for having entered into an arrangement [...] with another person who is not an owner or lessee of the premises by virtue of which that other person receives the rents or other payments.”

13. Under section 41 (2) (a) and (b) of the 2016 Act a tenant may apply for a rent repayment order only if (a) the offence relates to housing that, at the time of the offence, was let to the tenant, and (b) the offence was committed in the period of 12 months ending with the day on which the application is made. The application to the Tribunal was made on 29 July 2020. From the evidence before it the Tribunal was satisfied that the alleged offence occurred in the period of 12 months ending with the day on which the application was made to the Tribunal.
14. The amounts of the rent repayment orders are for Gabrielle Delprete and Jorge Camara the sum of £3,824.35 for the rent paid relating to the period of 2 September 2019 and 8 January 2020 and for Elisa Pierre the sum of £2,632.26 for the rent paid relating to the period of 30 September 2019 and 8 January 2020 and for Sakshi Kabra the sum of £2,248.65 for the rent paid relating to the period of 21 September 2019 and 8 January 2020. The applicant also supplied to the Tribunal proof of payment shown in the trial bundle. The Tribunal were satisfied that these payments had indeed be made.

The Offence

15. It was noted and confirmed by email that a license in respect of the property had been applied for on 9 January 2020. Therefore, the property was unlicensed prior to that date. The property was situated within a selective licensing area as designated by the London Borough of Tower Hamlets. The selective licensing scheme came into force on 1 October 2016. The selective licensing scheme has been implemented in the council ward areas of Weavers, Whitechapel, Spitalfields and Banglatown (pre 22 May 2014 ward boundaries) as delineated on the map in the Tower Hamlets Public selective licensing designation that was produced to the Tribunal in the trial bundle. Therefore, the Property was not licensed under the Selective Licensing Scheme.
16. There being a “house” as defined by statute, then a person commits an offence if he is a person having control of or managing a house which is required to be licensed under Part three of the Act but is not so licensed. The respondent has therefore committed an offence under section 95 (1) of the Housing Act 2004 (as amended by the Housing and Planning Act 2016) as the respondents were in control of an unlicensed property. The Tribunal relies upon the Upper Tribunal decision in the case of Goldsbrough and Swart v CA Property Management Ltd and Gardner [2019] UKUT 311(LC) in making this finding.

17. In the Upper Tribunal Judge Elizabeth Cooke found that where the alleged offence is controlling or managing an unlicensed HMO, a rent repayment order can only be made against a landlord of the property in question. While a managing agent cannot be a landlord, she concluded that the definition of a landlord, for the purposes of the 2016 Act, included both the tenants' immediate landlord and the freehold owners of the property. The order does not need to be made against the 'immediate landlord' of the tenants of the property. Rather, it can be made against any person who is "a landlord of the property where the tenant lived" (Goldsbrough v CA Property Management Ltd [2019] UKUT 311 (LC) at [32]-[33]).
18. To assist I quote some paragraphs of Judge Cooke's decision: -

"31. I also agree that a managing agent that does not have a lease of the property cannot be a landlord. If that is what the government guidance, quoted at paragraph 23 above, is intended to say then it is correct. But if it is intended to say that an intermediate lessee, who is the landlord of the applicants but the sub-tenant of the freeholders (or indeed of another superior lessee) cannot be subject to an RRO than that would appear to be incorrect and misleading. It would be very helpful for that guidance to be clarified.

32. Where I part company with the FTT is in its restriction of liability to an RRO to "the landlord" of the occupier. That is not what the 2016 Act says. The only conditions that it sets for liability to an RRO are, first, that the person is "a landlord" and second that that person has committed one of the offences. Certainly the person must be a landlord of the property where the tenant lived; section 41(2)(a) requires that the offence relates to housing that, at the time of the offence, was let to the tenant. It does not say that the person must be the immediate landlord of the occupier; if that was what was meant, the statute would have said so.

35. If the only possible respondent were the landlord who held the immediate reversion to the tenant, it would be possible for a freeholder to set up a situation where a rent repayment order could not be made, by first granting a lease of the property to a company that is not in control of, nor managing, the property and is ineligible for an HMO licence, and then having that company grant the residential tenancies....”

19. In the light of the above, the Tribunal took time to carefully consider the evidence regarding the absence of a licence but came to the inescapable conclusion that none had been issued by the Council. Therefore, the Tribunal concluded that this was an unlicensed property in relation to this application. There were no submissions or other evidence of a reasonable excuse for not having applied for a licence. Accordingly, the tribunal had no alternative other than to find that the respondent was guilty of the criminal offence contrary to the Housing Act 2004.
20. At points during the Applicants’ relevant period from 2 September 2019 to 9 January 2020 the property was occupied by 5 or more tenants. The property was not subject to Mandatory HMO licensing under s.55(2)(a) of the Housing Act 2004 as the Property was a purpose-built flat situated in a block comprising three or more self-contained flats as per the provisions of s.4(c)(ii) of the Licensing Of Houses In Multiple Occupation Order 2018. Although, Tower Hamlets have an additional licensing scheme in the borough, the Premises did not fall within the boundaries of the scheme. The appropriate license was not held during the relevant period, and the Respondent’s application for a license was duly made on 9 January 2020. The Respondents are liable to have a Rent Repayment Order made against them according to Section 263 of the Housing Act 2004.

The tribunal’s determination

21. The amount of the rent repayment order was extracted from the amount of rent paid by the applicants during the periods of occupancy as set out within the trial bundle where the rents actually paid were fully stated in a spreadsheet format. The amounts are set out in this decision at paragraph (2) above. These sums represent the maximum sum, (£100%), that might form the amount of rent repayment orders.
22. In deciding the amount of the rent repayment order, the Tribunal was mindful of the guidance to be found in the case of Parker v Waller and others [2012] UKUT 301 (LC) as to what should the Tribunal consider an appropriate order given the circumstances of the claim. Amongst other factors the tribunal should be mindful of the length of time that an offence was being committed and the culpability of the landlord is relevant; a professional landlord is expected to know better. From the evidence before it provided by the applicants the Tribunal took the view that the first respondent was not a professional landlord as it had no evidence to say otherwise. As was stated in paragraph 26 of Parker: -

“Paragraph (d) requires the RPT to take account of the conduct and financial circumstances of the landlord. The circumstances in which the offence was committed are always likely to be material. A deliberate flouting of the requirement to register will obviously merit a larger RRO than instances of inadvertence – although all HMO landlords ought to know the law. A landlord who is engaged professionally in letting is likely to be more harshly dealt with than the non-professional.”

23. Having said that, when considering the amount of a rent repayment order the starting point that the Tribunal is governed by is s.44(4), which states that that the Tribunal must “in particular, take into account” three express matters, namely:
- (a) the conduct of the landlord and the tenant,
 - (b) the financial circumstances of the landlord, and
 - (c) whether the landlord has at any time been convicted of an offence to which this Chapter applies.

The Tribunal must therefore consider the conduct of the parties and the financial circumstances of the respondent. Express matter (c) was not considered as no such convictions apply so far as the two respondents are concerned.

24. The Tribunal were mindful of the recent Upper Tribunal decision in Vadamalayan v Stewart and Others [2020] UKUT 183 (LC). In particular Judge Elizabeth Cooke said: -

12. That means that there is nothing to detract from the obvious starting point, which is the rent itself for the relevant period of up to twelve months. Indeed, there is no other available starting point, which is unsurprising; this is a rent repayment order so we start with the rent.

14. It is not clear to me that the restriction of a rent repayment order to an account of profits was consistent with Parliament’s intention in enacting sections 74 and 75 of the 2004 Act. The removal of the landlord’s profits was – as the President acknowledged at his paragraph 26 – not the only purpose of a rent repayment order even under the provisions then in force. But under the current statutory provisions the restriction of a rent repayment order to the landlord’s profit is impossible to justify. The rent repayment order is no longer tempered by a requirement of reasonableness; and it is not possible to find in the current statute any support for limiting the rent repayment order to the landlord's profits. That principle should no longer be applied.

53. The provisions of the 2016 Act are rather more hard-edged than those of the 2004 Act. There is no longer a requirement of reasonableness and therefore, I suggest, less scope for the balancing of factors that was envisaged in Parker v Waller. The landlord has to repay the rent, subject to considerations of conduct and his financial circumstances. There may be a case, as I said at paragraph 15 above, for deducting the cost of utilities if the landlord pays for them out of the rent (which was not the case here). But there is no justification for deducting other expenditure. The appellant incurred costs for his own benefit, in order to get a rental income from the property; most were incurred in performance of the appellant's own obligations as landlord. The respondents as tenants were entitled to the items set out in the appellant's schedule of expenditure (insofar as they do relate to the property; in the circumstances I do not have to resolve disputes of fact for example about item 8). The respondents are entitled to a rent repayment order. There is no reason to deduct what the appellant spent in meeting one obligation from what he has to pay to meet the other.

54. The appellant also wants to deduct what he had to pay by way of mortgage payments to the TSB and interest on another loan which has not been shown to relate to the property. The FTT refused to deduct the mortgage payments because the mortgage was taken out in 2016 whereas the property was purchased in 2014, so that the mortgage did not appear to have funded the purchase. The appellant says that the property was bought some years before that and that this was a re-mortgage. He did not produce evidence about that to the FTT and he could have done so. More importantly, what a landlord pays by way of mortgage repayments – whether capital or, as in this case, interest only – is an investment in the landlord's own property and it is difficult to see why the tenant should fund that investment by way of a deduction from a rent repayment order. The other loan has not been shown to relate to the property and I regard it as irrelevant, as did the FTT.

25. In the light of the above when considering financial circumstances, the Tribunal should not consider profit, mortgage payments or reasonableness. So, the Tribunal did not take account of any of these points when coming to the amount of the rent repayment order. The tribunal could not see any justification for a deduction for any outgoing. The conduct of the respondents did not seem to justify this allowance. The respondent had simply failed to engage with these Tribunal proceedings or at all.

26. However, as has been observed quantum of any award is not related to the profit of the respondent, following Vadamalayan. The only expense deductions that may be allowed, at the discretion of the Tribunal, are for utilities paid on behalf of the tenants by the landlord. It can be argued that council tax is a fixed cost of the landlord, also payable when the property is empty. It is not “consumed at a rate the tenant chooses” (Vadamalayan, §16), as per utilities and should not be an allowable expense. The Tribunal agrees with this assessment of the relevance of this outgoing. In any event details of this and other expenses were not submitted so in the absence any witness before the Tribunal to give evidence on behalf of the respondents, the Tribunal was unable to take into account these items.
27. The Tribunal then turned to the matter of the conduct of the parties. The landlord should have licenced this property but did not. This is a significant factor in relation to the matter of conduct. It remains the case that this property should have been licenced and regrettably it was not.
28. The applicants asserted that the Applicants’ deposits were not protected in a Government approved scheme and were placed into a Thamlet Estates private bank account. This is a breach of Section 213 of the Housing Act 2004 and this has made it extremely difficult to seek the return of the deposit. To date the Applicants’ deposits have not been returned. The applicants also asserted that the property was plagued by a continued pest problem which the Respondents did not adequately address. In evidence given at the time of the hearing one of the applicants confirmed that she found a rat in the kitchen sink.
29. It was also said that there was an issue at the property with the plumbing and the sink was continually blocked. Under Section 11 of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 it is the Respondents responsibility to ensure that the sink remains in proper working order. However, in correspondence between the Respondents’ agent and the Applicants’ declaring “unfortunately we do not deal with blocks no more. The tenants will need to fix this”

The Tribunal accepts that this description of the negative aspects of the conduct of the respondent should be taken into account when considering the amount or level of the rent repayment order necessary in this case.

30. Furthermore, there was a distinct lack of engagement with the Tribunal on the part of the respondents such that debarring proceedings arose. The failure of the respondents to comply with the directions of the Tribunal is aggravating conduct. The respondents have made no response at any stage in the process, despite repeated valid service of documents upon them. No one appeared at the hearing.

31. Consequently, while the Tribunal started at the 100% level of the rent it thought that there were no reductions that might be appropriate, proportionate or indeed necessary to take account of the factors in the Act. Therefore, the Tribunal decided particularly in the light of the absence of a licence that there should be no reduction from the maximum figures set out above giving a final figure of 100% of the claim. This figure represents the Tribunals overall view of the circumstances that determined the amount of the rent repayment order.
32. Consequently, the Tribunal concluded that a rent repayment order be made for Gabrielle Delprete and Jorge Camara the sum of £3,824.35 and for Elisa Pierre the sum of £2,632.26 and for Sakshi Kabra the sum of £2,248.65. The orders arise as a consequence of the Tribunal being satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the respondent had committed an offence pursuant to s.95 of the Housing Act 2004, namely that a person commits an offence if he is a person/company having control of or managing a house which is required to be licensed under Part three of the 2004 Act but is not so licensed.
33. Rule 13 of The Tribunal Procedure (First-tier Tribunal) (Property Chamber) Rules 2013 No 1169 (L.8) does allow for the refund of Tribunal fees. Rule 13(2) states that “The Tribunal may make an order requiring a party to reimburse to any other party the whole or part of the amount of any fee paid by the other party which has not been remitted by the Lord Chancellor.”
34. There is no requirement of unreasonableness in this regard. Therefore, in this case the Tribunal considers it appropriate and proportionate in the light of the determinations set out above that the respondents refund the Applicants’ Tribunal fee payments of £300. In the circumstances the tribunal determines that there be an order for the refund of the application fees in the sum of £300 pursuant to Rule 13(2) of the Tribunal Rules.

Annex

Rights of appeal

By rule 36(2) of the Tribunal Procedure (First-tier Tribunal) (Property Chamber) Rules 2013, the tribunal is required to notify the parties about any right of appeal they may have.

If a party wishes to appeal this decision to the Upper Tribunal (Lands Chamber), then a written application for permission must be made to the First-tier Tribunal at the regional office which has been dealing with the case.

The application for permission to appeal must arrive at the regional office within 28 days after the tribunal sends written reasons for the decision to the person making the application.

If the application is not made within the 28 day time limit, such application must include a request for an extension of time and the reason for not complying with the 28 day time limit; the tribunal will then look at such reason(s) and decide whether to allow the application for permission to appeal to proceed, despite not being within the time limit.

The application for permission to appeal must identify the decision of the tribunal to which it relates (i.e. give the date, the property and the case number), state the grounds of appeal and state the result the party making the application is seeking.

If the tribunal refuses to grant permission to appeal, a further application for permission may be made to the Upper Tribunal (Lands Chamber).
