- section 9 which makes amendments to section 1(4) of the Adoption and Children Act 2002 to require courts and adoption agencies to consider a child’s relationship with their prospective adopters where the child has already been placed with them;
- section 33 which extends the Secretary of State’s intervention powers under section 497A of the Education Act 1996 as far as they relate to functions specified in section 50 of the Children Act 2004 to Combined Authorities in England;
- section 42 which allows the Secretary of State to determine and publish improvement standards for social workers in England and carry out assessments as to whether those standards have been met (or make arrangements for others to set those standards and assess people against them).
